Reginald Cooper Square. Mayor wants civic plaza to get a little TLC with help from Ottawa

ANGELA MULLINS
angela.mullins@metronews.ca

Tired of looking at a concrete plaza with weeds peeking through the cracks, Mayor Joe Fontana wants city staff to work improvements at Reginald Cooper Square onto a list of projects being submitted for federal funding.

"Every third or fourth week I go out there … and I have to look at weeds that keep growing," Fontana said on Monday. "I must tell you, I'm totally disgusted with the way that looks. That's not the kind of look I think the city should have."

A plan for revamping the plaza — which runs along Wellington from the north doors of city hall to Centennial Hall — was drafted in 2003, said Andrew Macpherson, the city's manager of parks, planning and design. The upgrade was put off at the time, but Macpherson is all for tossing a similar project in the hat for federal Community Infrastructure Improvement money.

"We can revisit (the 2003) plan and do up a new cost estimate and see what's feasible and doable," he said. "Certainly, (the square) could use the work."

The infrastructure fund was created in this year's federal budget, with $150 million set aside over two years for upgrades to community facilities. Municipalities are eligible to receive up to $1 million each. City staff have compiled a working list of about $5.4 million in eligible projects. The deadline for submissions is Aug. 24.

To-do list

Some projects for which federal funding might be requested:

- Creating trail links between Richmond and Adelaide; expanding the skate park in White Oaks; upgrading Carling Arena, Storybook Gardens and Labatt Park.

Council to consider expense hike

Councillors' expense accounts could be getting larger after the finance committee gave preliminary approval on Monday to upping the cap on annual spending to $15,000 from $8,500. The increase will be considered by full council on July 24. Money would come from a fund of about $170,000 that used to cover the now-defunct board of control.

City looking for help with Wortley Village property

London Normal School. Officials preparing to seek interest in partnership to buy provincially owned heritage property

angela.mullins@metronews.ca

City officials are looking for a partner to help with the acquisition of a key landmark in Wortley Village.

Council's finance and administrative services committee gave approval Monday to issuing a request for "expressions of interest" to community groups that might want to work with the city in taking over the former London Normal School on Elmwood Avenue East.

The province owns the property and has declared it surplus. Because of that, Infrastructure Ontario must now offer it up to other levels of government. If they're not interested, it will be sold at auction.

City officials have long wanted to turn the land around the school into a park. But they don't want the 112-year-old building.

Since the province hasn't shown interest in selling the city only a piece of the parcel, officials are hoping someone will step up and take over the building, reopening it for public use.

The request for expressions of interests would be put out to non-profit and for-profit groups alike, said Gregg Barrett, a city land-use planning manager.

"We're fishing in a very shallow pond, and we're trying to get as many fish as we can in that very shallow pond," Barrett told councillors on Monday.

Moving ahead will require full council approval on July 24.

Administrators hope to issue the request by Aug. 1, evaluate proposals with community input in October and make a final recommendation in November.

Buying the property has not been included in city budget forecasts and possible costs were discussed behind closed doors at Monday's meeting.

The history

- The London Normal School was built from 1898 to 1900, serving as a teacher's college until 1958.
- The building housed a junior high school from 1958 to 1963.
- It became the public school board's offices after that, serving that role until 1984.
- It housed the Catholic school board administration from 1985 to 2004, and has sat empty since.

Tragedy. London woman dies suddenly at Toronto punk-rock festival

Taylor Nesseth FACEBOOK.COM

Police confirmed that a 19-year-old London woman has died after being found unconscious near the stage at Toronto's Molson Amphitheatre on Sunday afternoon.

The woman was identified as Taylor Nesseth of London.

Paramedics were called to the scene after someone found Nesseth, called 911 and started performing CPR.

Attempts by paramedics to resuscitate her were unsuccessful. Nesseth was unconscious and she was not breathing. She was taken to hospital where she was pronounced dead.

The coroner has been notified, although officials have suggested a "pre-existing medical condition" may be to blame. The woman's death is not considered suspicious.

Nesseth was one of thousands of people at the Molson Amphitheatre on Sunday afternoon for the Vans Warped Tour.

Dozens of punk and rock bands were playing sets during the all-day, outdoor show.

Canada Cup. London hosts pigskin prospects

The nation's finest under-18 football players will clash in the Forest City this week during Football Canada's 12-game Canada Cup tournament.

Western University's TD Waterhouse Stadium is scheduled to play host to the annual showcase that includes eight teams from seven provinces, including Ontario East and Ontario West.

The country's brightest 1993- and 1994-born talents will fight for gridiron glory.

"Quebec is a very strong team," Patrick Delottinville, a spokesperson for Football Canada, said of one of the favourites to win gold. "They have three returning players from last year's championship-winning team, and always have a premier program."

Ontario West's roster consists of six Londoners — defensive backs Ian Burdett and AJ Thompson, defensive lineman Derek Drouillard, receiver Zach Marcus, offensive lineman Tyler O'Henly, and linebacker Adam Wilken — with the rest of its positions being filled out by players hailing from cities like Sault Ste. Marie, Georgetown and Oakville.

"Having the hometown crowd is always an advantage," Delottinville said, referring to Ontario West's chances of claiming a medal.

Delottinville adds each Canadian university football program will have representatives at the event for scouting purposes.

In 2010, the Football Canada Cup switched from an under-19 to an under-18 tournament.

The last time the championship took place in Ontario was in Waterloo in 2005.

Fund a factor in jobs moving from London to Halifax: Chorus

A raw deal? Ontario spokesman says province not given a fair shake

A $16.5-million funding package from the Nova Scotia government helped influence Chorus Aviation Inc.'s decision to keep its Halifax heavy-maintenance base open over its London facility, the president of the airline operator said Monday.

Joe Randell said Jazz Aviation, a subsidiary of Chorus, was strongly swayed after the provincial government offered financial incentives to expand in Halifax.

"This assistance from the province was a significant factor in making the decision to consolidate our heavy maintenance here," Randell said following a news conference at the Halifax Stanfield International Airport.

Joe Randell

Randell said Chorus had been in talks with the Ontario government to keep the jobs in London, but declined to elaborate on the "several alternatives" his company considered.

But a spokesman for Ontario's economic development minister said the company didn't give the province a chance to find a way to keep the London facility operating.

"We were aware that Jazz had been conducting a strategic facility review, but Ontario officials were not given an opportunity to engage in this review or offer support to retain the facility in London," Andrew Block said in an email.

"We understand that one significant consideration for Jazz had been physical limitations at their site in London driven by significant fleet changes."

The announcement comes days after Chorus said it would add six new planes to its fleet, but in doing so will close its London site next summer, a move that will affect about 200 workers. Randell said some of those workers will be offered jobs in Halifax.

"We're not sure how many people will take the move," Randell said.

"They will be offered assistance to move to Nova Scotia, et cetera, over the next year."

- The company will benefit from another $2.5-million forgivable loan based on job targets, as well as $2 million to recruit new employees or upgrade current employees' skills.

Study. YouTube now a major news platform

Changing media. TV news still dominates, but video-sharing site emerging as place to go in times of big events

Details

- More than a third of the most-watched videos came from citizens.
- More than half came from news organizations, but footage in those videos sometimes incorporated footage shot by YouTube users.

A new study has found that YouTube has become a major platform for news, one where viewers are turning for eyewitness videos in times of major events and natural disasters.

The Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism on Monday released its examination of 15 months of the most popular news videos on the Google Inc.-owned site.

It found that while viewership for TV news still easily outpaces those consuming news on YouTube, the video-sharing site is a growing digital environment where professional journalism mingles with citizen content.

"There's a new form of video journalism on this platform," said Amy Mitchell, deputy director of the Pew Research Center's Project for Excellence in Journalism.

"It's a form in which the relationship between news organizations and citizens is more dynamic and more multiverse than we've seen in most other platforms before."

The Japanese earthquake and tsunami was the most-viewed news event during the length of the study, which spanned January 2011 to March 2012. The top videos from Japan included footage from surveillance cameras, a news network and a Japanese Coast Guard vessel — a typical variety of sources.

"One of the things that emerges here is the power of bearing witness as a part of a news-consumption process," said Mitchell. "Many of the most-viewed stories that we're looking at here have real powerful imagery around them." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. lawyer may be called as witness in Magnotta case

Body-parts murder. Romeo Salta says he met with accused killer, who complained of being abused by a mystery man

A lawyer who heard Luka Rocco Magnotta make allegations about being repeatedly abused and forced to have sex with animals says he could be called as a witness at his murder trial.

Romeo Salta, who says he met with Magnotta several times at his Manhattan office in the winter of 2010-11, told The Canadian Press he was informed of the possibility by the defence team last week.

Magnotta, 29, is now facing multiple charges, including first-degree murder, in the May slaying and dismemberment of Montreal university student Jun Lin. He has pleaded not guilty to all counts and is due back in court next March.

A day before Salta was told he might be called to testify, the attorney spoke to a reporter about Magnotta's assertions that he was frequently abused — physically, emotionally and sexually — by a mysterious acquaintance known as "Manny."

Salta insisted that Magnotta gave him his blessing to go public with the disturbing details of the alleged attacks, if he were ever arrested or killed. The lawyer said Magnotta wanted people to know his side of the story.

But two days after discussing his exchanges with Magnotta, Salta indicated he's been told to say no more.

He declined to answer follow-up questions because of a conversation he said he had with Magnotta's lead defence counsel, Luc Leclair.

"Consequently, I have been advised not to disseminate any further information than what has already been said, especially when it comes to 'Manny,'" Salta wrote in an email.

Leclair did not immediately return a message asking about Manny and whether Salta could be a witness.

Salta recalled that a frightened Magnotta first contacted him in December 2010 or early January 2011 over concerns police were closing in on him amid a swirl of animal-cruelty accusations.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Email exchanges

- The Canadian Press obtained several emails Salta said he received from Magnotta over the weeks that followed their first meeting. All are dated from January 2011, more than a year before Lin's death.

Rebels push into Damascus

Syrian rebels fired grenades at tanks and troops while regime armour shelled Damascus neighbourhoods on Monday, sending terrified families fleeing the most sustained and widespread fighting in the capital since the start of the uprising 16 months ago.

A ring of fierce clashes nearly encircled the heavily guarded capital as rebels seeking to overthrow President Bashar Assad pushed the civil war that has been building in Syria's impoverished provinces closer to the seat of power.

While the clashes were focused in a string of neighbourhoods in the city's southwest, for many of its four million people the violence brought scarily close to home the strife that has deeply scarred other Syrian cities.

In high-end downtown cafés frequented by the business and government elite tightly bound to the Assad regime, customers watched as black smoke billowed on the horizon and the boom of government shells reverberated in the distance.

"Without a doubt, this is all anyone is talking about today," a Damascus activist who gave his name as Noor Bitar said via Skype. "The sounds of war are clear throughout the city. They are bouncing off the buildings."

Syria's violence has grown increasingly bloody and chaotic in recent months as the uprising has morphed from a peaceful protest movement seeking political change into an armed insurgency seeking to topple the regime by force.

Anti-regime activists say more than 17,000 people have been killed, and the government says it has lost more than 4,000 security officers. It does not provide numbers of civilian dead.

International diplomacy has failed to stop the violence, and world powers remain deeply divided over who is responsible and how to stop it.

The U.S. and many Western nations have called on Assad to leave power, while Russia, China and Iran have stood by the regime.

On Monday, Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov accused the West of using blackmail to secure a UN Security Council resolution that could allow the use of force in Syria.

Goldman Sachs downgrades Tim Hortons to 'sell'

Wall Street. Increasing pressure in competitive market forces investment firm to lower rating of coffee-and-doughnut chain

Tim Hortons has been downgraded to a "sell" rating at Goldman Sachs over concerns that moderation in same-store sales could be a harbinger of more pressure in the hyper-competitive coffee market.

A note from analyst Michael Kelter at the Wall Street investment firm says he is concerned about early indications of "impending Canadian saturation" that could reflect increased pressure.

"We see a five per cent downside in Tim Hortons shares versus a seven per cent average upside across the sector," he wrote.

He also expects the company might report a miss on same-store sales when it reports second-quarter earnings next month. Earnings-per-share estimates were reduced to $2.72 from $2.77 for 2012, he said. Other reductions were made for 2013, with EPS down to $3.06 from $3.13, and to $3.34 from $3.48 in 2014.

The Canadian coffee market has faced a growing number of new entrants, including an expansion by Seattle coffee chain Starbucks and low-priced coffee and specialty drinks at McDonalds.

Tim Hortons has responded by expanding its menu to include a broader array of lunch offerings, including hot food, and new specialty drinks like frozen lemonade.

Kelter said he would consider re-evaluating his rating if there were signs of a sustained rebound in Canada, or if Tim Hortons escalated the timeline of its rollout in other countries.

Real estate. Canadian home resales drop in June

Canada's real-estate market is showing signs of cooling off with national home sales and the average home price down year over year, indicators that have at least one senior economist wondering if the once red-hot market is entering a "Big Sleep."

The new data from the Canadian Real Estate Association follows several reports saying some real-estate markets and types of housing are overvalued, though there's a range of opinions about how much and how quickly prices will decline. That's left economists and consumers watching closely for signs that demand has softened to the point where prices will start going down.

On Monday, the CREA reported the number of previously owned homes sold last month dropped 4.4 per cent from June 2011, the first annual decline since April 2011.

Resales of homes were also down 1.3 per cent in June from May, with a total of 46,444 transactions through CREA members.

Labour dispute. Vale wins court bid to prosecute strikers blocking nickel site

Mining giant Vale won a court application Monday to prosecute striking workers if they block access to a new nickel-processing site, upping the ante in an increasingly nasty labour dispute in southern Newfoundland.

What started Thursday as a wildcat strike by about 90 crane operators entered its fifth day as the company and workers traded accusations of intimidation and ill will. About 1,000 workers — half the usual labour force — went back to work Monday in Long Harbour, N.L., north of Placentia on the Avalon Peninsula, after union leaders urged them to respect a collective agreement signed in 2009. The rest stayed away in part, Vale says, because striking workers have snarled traffic on the road leading to the site.

Company spokesman Bob Carter said production can't fully resume without the crane operators as the dispute costs Vale several million dollars a day. Carter also said he's heard that some returning workers got threatening emails, text messages or phone calls. He did not provide examples and a union spokesman for the crane operators, Roy Hawco, said he wasn't aware of such tactics.

Infrastructure. Atco to work with remote communities

Atco Group said Monday it is starting a new business that will provide pre-fabricated buildings to remote aboriginal communities across Canada that badly need infrastructure.

The Calgary-based company said the new subsidiary, Atco Sustainable Communities, can design and build entire communities, including offices, schools, daycare centres, housing, hockey arenas and retail outlets.

"Pretty much every piece of infrastructure that you find in cities is lacking — not necessarily everything in every community, but every community needs something," Atco Sustainable Communities president Boris Rassin said in an interview.

Atco Sustainable Communities already has "tens of millions" of dollars in business, with six projects already on the go, he said.

Atco president and CEO Nancy Southern said the company has been partnering with indigenous communities since 1981. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Economy. Canada continues with slow growth: IMF

The International Monetary Fund is calling for further government action amid signs the recovery is faltering in many countries, though Canada's outlook has held up better than most other advanced economies.

The 188-country organization said Monday that it expects Canada's economy will grow modestly, by 2.1 per cent this year and 2.2 per cent next year — virtually unchanged from the IMF's forecast in April.

That's not the case in many parts of the world.

The IMF's July outlook warns that, after a better-than-expected start to the year, growth is slowing in many parts of the world, shaving two-tenths of a point off of the IMF's 2013 estimate, which falls to 3.9 per cent.

The 2012 growth estimate has also been reduced, by one-tenth of a point, to 3.5 per cent.

Growth-rates forecast

The Canadian growth rates forecast by the IMF are below the Bank of Canada's call of 2.4 per cent in 2012 and 2013, but in line with most private-sector economists, who have been downsizing expectations the past few months.

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/shesays

A collective groan was heard across the web last week when Facebook announced yet more changes are coming to the social-networking site. According to a July 11 blog post, Facebook Groups have been updated to allow users to see who has viewed each post within the shared group.

Back in June, a similar "seen by" feature was added to Facebook's mobile-messaging service to let users keep track of when messages had been read. It's an annoyance for pretty much everyone who has ever had an awkward conversation on the Internet.

Some Facebook fans are concerned that these public tracking features are just a step towards a more transparent interface across the entire site, giving friends the ability to see who has clicked through photo albums, wall posts, tagged photos and other individual profile materials. These recent updates may just be the beginning of some major changes that could eradicate our ability to browse the site anonymously.

Facebook frowners

"We're happy to relinquish all of our juicy market-research details to third-party apps, but please don't take away our ability to lurk around the social network unseen."

Facebook has always been about connecting with your friends, but it has also had the underlying (and just as important) component of "creeping" through others' online activity without detection. More than likely, you don't really want everyone to know when you've spent hours looking at (and silently judging) your ex-boyfriend's tagged photos or cheesy wedding photo albums posted by long-lost high school friends. Any new features that track and report on your online activity will effectively ruin the guilty-pleasure aspect of the social-networking site.

Would you still creep if you knew the person you were creeping knew too? CONTRIBUTED

Facebook creeping has always been an ethical grey area, but users are happy to play along in the shared fantasy that we aren't cyber-stalking one another. And while the free service is something we voluntarily opt into, we tend to have a certain sense of entitlement when it comes to Facebook, a sort of naive sense of ownership over our online profiles. We're happy to relinquish all of our juicy market-research details to third-party apps, but please don't take away our ability to lurk around the social network unseen.

Anonymous observation has arguably been one of the most important factors in Facebook's mass appeal. And while it wasn't too good to be true, it might have been too good to last.

It will be interesting to see if the recent information-sharing changes will pave the way for a major site-wide overhaul. Will users accept the new rules and adapt their browsing behaviour, or simply move on to something new in the fickle world of social networking?

Equestrian design dashes through field

Clearly one farmer is already reaping Olympic success. Graham Wadsworth, owner of Raines Hall Farm in England's picturesque Lake District, has created in a maize field the image of a giant horse rider leaping over a jump in honour of Great Britain's equestrian team, which is highly favoured to win gold.

Every summer Wadsworth's farm becomes the Lakeland Maize Maze, welcoming more than 20,000 visitors. METRO

Maize maze: A how-to

- How it was made: "The pattern was first designed on a computer, then it was plotted using GPS. When using this technology, modern tractors can auto-steer and cut within an inch. I had a portable computer mounted on the tractor guiding me as I was carving out the design. You don't make a mistake using this sort of technology."
- How it was done before: "Before, when GPS technology was not available, I used a device called a fixed-point transmitter, which would relay information between a satellite and the moving tractor. It wasn't as accurate and once when the system batteries failed, one of the details of design I was working on — the head of a llama —did not come out as I had planned!"
- How it was done long ago: "We drew the design on graph paper. After dividing it on the paper, we would cut the field square-by-square. In fact, the results could be better but it was more labour-intensive — it would take more than a week to complete."

Judges disciplined over Lohan case

A California oversight panel has disciplined two Beverly Hills judges for their handling of a Lindsay Lohan drunken driving case. Documents obtained by the Los Angeles Times show Los Angeles County Judges Marsha Revel and Elden Fox have been admonished by the state's Commission on Judicial Performance. The judges got what are called advisory letters, considered the lowest of disciplinary actions. The panel determined Revel improperly met alone with an attorney who wanted to take over Lohan's defence in the 2010 DUI case. Fox was found to have erred in denying the actress bail on a relatively minor charge and refusing to hear her attorney's arguments.

The ups and downs of Comic-Con 2012

Review. Our California writer looks at what this year's geek fest had to offer its fans — both bad and good

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Celebrities, artists, filmmakers and roughly 170,000 fans invaded San Diego for the annual pop culture Woodstock that is Comic-Con, where Hollywood rolled out teases and announcements for the next several years of film and TV properties over an exhausting four days. Most of the big reveals came in Hall H, the massive auditorium into which fans line up for days. So, was it worth the wait?

Biggest hits:

Marvel Entertainment: Riding into Comic-Con high on the wave of Avengers success, the comic book publisher turned movie studio announced a slew of new films, including sequels to Captain America and Thor.

And then Robert Downey Jr. danced into the Hall, blurring the lines between himself and Tony Stark, to unveil footage from next year's Iron Man 3.

In non-Avengers news, Marvel executive Kevin Fiege also confirmed a movie version of Guardians of the Galaxy, about an outer space-set team of mutants, aliens and a raccoon sworn to fight off interstellar threats.

Elysium: District 9 director Neill Blomkamp finally unveiled some of followup film, about a future in which the haves live it up on a space station while the have-nots toil on the dilapidated Earth below. Not only did Blomkamp stun the Hall H crowd with footage from the film, he also brought along Jodie Foster, a Comic-Con virgin and closet geek — Foster copped to being a huge True Blood fan.

Biggest misses:

The Host: While kicking off Comic-Con with a panel for the final Twilight film, the series' author, Stephenie Meyer snuck in a look at the film adaptation of her followup, the Host, directed by Andrew Niccol. The footage of the sci-fi story about alien possession left fans scratching their heads — and some walking out before the screening had finished.

Django Unchained: While it was awfully cool of Quentin Tarantino to bring his revenge western starring Jamie Foxx and Christoph Waltz to Comic-Con — despite it not necessarily being normal Comic-Con fare — there are a few things he didn't do: He didn't show off much new material, instead opting to show a seven-minute "sizzle reel" that had screened for insiders at Cannes, and he didn't stick around to talk to the press after the Hall H panel. One thing he did do? Put a damper on plans for Kill Bill: Vol. 3. Not cool at all, Quentin.

Go ask Alice. Ashley Greene talks about wrapping up Twilight

The Twilight film series has been something of a game-changer for Comic-Con. When the franchise paid its first visit, the influx of diehard female fans ruffled some fanboy feathers. Metro sat down with Ashley Greene, who plays vampire Alice Cullen in the series, about the series' last trip to San Diego.

How is the last Comic-Con for Twilight going?
It's good. It's as intense as ever. I looked at my schedule and was like, "Wow!" But then it's great. It's a great feeling to know the last film we're doing, the fifth movie, there's still so much interest in it and that people are still passionate about it, and I got to see fans that I saw the first time I came here.

Walking Dead. San Diego succumbs to zombies to celebrate 100th issue

Despite all the superheroes, aliens and giant monsters around San Diego, this year the Comic-Con weekend belonged to the Walking Dead, the AMC show based on Robert Kirkman's comic book about surviving a zombie apocalypse.

The 100th issue of the comic hit stores last week, and fans got their first look at season three of the popular series, which debuts worldwide Oct. 14, including new cast-members Danai Gurira as Michonne and David Morrissey as the infamous Governor. "I'm getting a sense of (how big this is). It's fan base is massive, so I'm really over the moon to be joining," Morrissey tells Metro.

The enthusiasm for the show was evident outside the convention centre as well, with Petco Park turned into a zombie survival course — and the backdrop for a star-studded party celebrating the 100th issue. And fans in zombie garb were everywhere, coming together for a traffic-stopping "zombie walk" on Friday afternoon.

"Never underestimate Comic-Con," Kirkman says.

The Three Stooges

Director. Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly

Stars. Sean Hayes, Chris Diamantopolous, Will Sasso

Easy to see why Bobby and Peter Farrelly wanted to make this irony-free homage to the second most revered clown troupe after the Marx Brothers, despite protests from Stooges fans. For all of their eye-poking and mallet-swinging antics, there was an innocence about the Stooges, who reigned from the Vaudeville '20s until the end of the Swinging '60s, with fitful revivals since. They were fools for the sake of being fools, too stunned to be snide or cynical. This benevolently anarchic spirit remains in The Three Stooges, which makes just two concessions to the modern era: a reality TV subplot involving The Jersey Shore cast and a tacked-on warning to kids that they should leave eye pokes and head bashes to the pros. After an hour of this nonsense, with more than a half hour still to go, you start to feel like a masochist watching three sadists. You see one nose hair being extracted by a hammer claw, you've seen 'em all.
PETER HOWELL

Casa de mi Padre

Director. Matt Piedmont

Stars. Will Ferrell, Gael Garcia Bernal, Diego Luna

Will Ferrell takes risks with his comedy, yet too often settles for material that's more amusing on paper than it is on the screen. Casa de mi Padre is the latest example. Ferrell plays a Mexican ranchero who speaks Spanish as if he were born to the tongue. It's audacious, given the huge resistance of Americans to subtitled films. It's also a good idea. If only it were funnier. Most of the rest of the cast of this hammy drama, a western spoof of cheesy Mexican telenovelas, actually are native Spanish speakers. Supposedly filmed in widescreen "Mexico-Scope," but also filled with deliberately fake animals and props, Casa de mi Padre gets by on Ferrell's abundant good cheer, his Berlitz Spanish and his willingness to make himself the joke.

Who dumped who on Idol?

scene@metronews.ca

When Jennifer Lopez and Steven Tyler announced they were leaving American Idol last week, both stars cited their busy, rewarding lives. How could they continue to judge a reality show when they had babies to take care of and devoted fans to entertain?

But there might be a much easier explanation here: money.

According to TheWrap.com, Lopez was actually let go when she asked for a $2 million raise and Fox "surprised her" by declining to make a counter offer. During an appearance on Monday's Good Morning America, the singer hinted that it wasn't exactly a tidy break.

"I love them, they love me, and it's hard when I feel like I should move on," she said of the split. "I don't know, I don't know if it's even done yet … I know that I'm moving on."

As for Tyler — who, like Lopez, spent two seasons on the show — the network decided not to renew his contract as it looks to revamp the struggling show's format, a source tells TheWrap.

Sure it's embarrassing, but don't sweat it, guys. Most of us get fired over far less money and have never known the joy of giving Ryan Seacrest an exit wedgie.

It's all in her head: Haircut nothing short of shocking for Hathaway

Anne Hathaway is enjoying the ultra-short haircut she's sporting from filming Les Miserables, but it definitely took some getting used to.

"I wasn't expecting it to be such a big deal, because it was my idea," she tells Kelly Ripa during an interview. "I've now done backflips out of windows, I've jumped off buildings, and cutting my hair reduced me to, like, mental patient-level crying. I was inconsolable."

Tres romantique! Jackson and Kruger falling for France

Joshua Jackson and Diane Kruger are settling into life living in Paris, and they couldn't be happier, the Fringe star tells People magazine.

"The most romantic thing about Paris for me is just walking around and being imersed in the city," Jackson says.

"Because Diane has lived there for so long and we have an apartment there, the most romantic part of our day is waking up in our own neighborhood and going down to a cafe and just having breakfast — which is a really quotidian thing to do, but to do it in that city is pretty nice."

Do you go on holiday, taking a break from the hustle and bustle, but spend most of the time updating Facebook and sharing Instagram photos? New York based Yogi David Romanelli is worried for your soul. "Technology is just like sucking on a cigarette, it's just as addictive and bad for us," he tells Metro. "Gadgets are a bad habit. We have less capacity to experience and remember memories using a machine than we do through our five senses."

Quoted

"Let this be the moment when you have no desire to reach for a gadget.

David Romanelli
New York based Yogi

Peel yourself away from technology, he recommends. To do so, Romanelli suggests setting aside one moment in the day (aside from sleep) and doing something completely disconnected from your usual routine.

"Take a Yoga or Pilates class and let this be a moment when you have no desire to reach out for a buzzing gadget," he says.

"Our mind is a spoiled brat that's used to having complete control over our body. It's important to stop thinking once in a while and tap into something within us that's more powerful than our thoughts, whatever that is. This 'thing' doesn't have to be spiritual, it can also be emotional or physical."

At the start of the class, your mind will be kicking and screaming to take over your body but you have to get past that moment and be in the present, explains Romanelli. Yoga and Pilates are exercises that help you trigger sensations and get back in touch with your body.

"No app in the world can replace smell or touch or improve emotional connections," he adds.

So, even if it's just for a moment — stop functioning and get back into your body. Our beach Pilates sequence is the best way to start doing just that.

How to do the Beach Body Pilates Workout:

"This will tone all your trouble spots: bra bulge, triceps, hips, abs, waist, thighs and buttocks. You will stand taller, feel lighter and be leaner. Commit to this workout for up to 20 minutes, five days a week and within weeks you'll look amazing," says Metro's Pilates expert Kristin McGee.

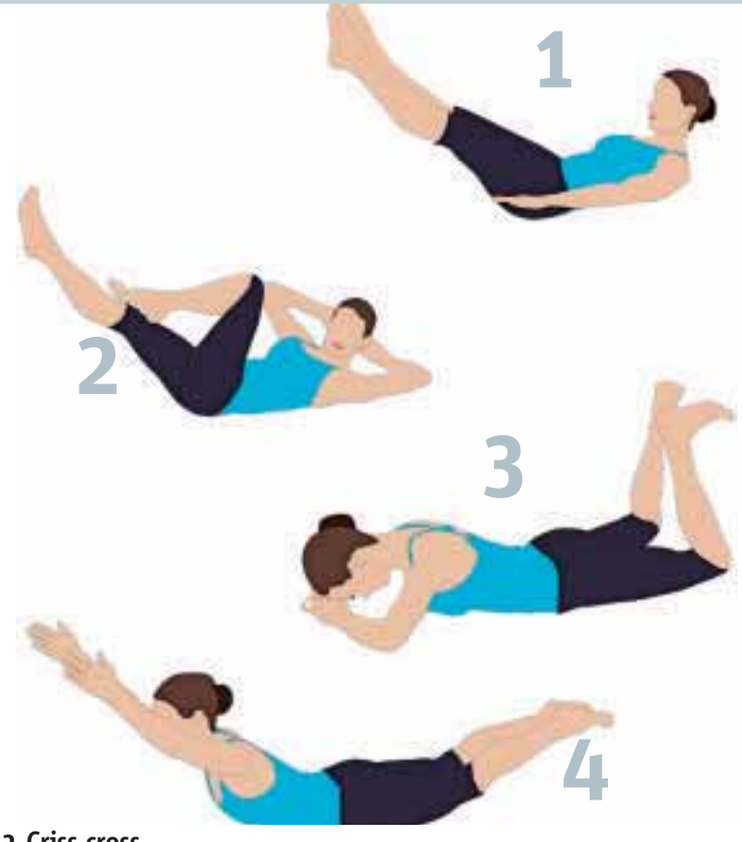
As you go through each move, keep the six fundamentals of Pilates in mind: Centering, concentration, control, precision, breath and flow.

1. 100s:

Lying on your back with your entire spine pressing in to the mat, lift your legs up in the air to a tabletop position and engage your lower abdominals.

Stretch your arms forward as you lift your head and neck up off the mat. Gaze at your belly button and extend your legs out to a 45 degree angle.

Start pumping the arms up and down, breathing in for 5 pumps, and out for 5.
Reps:10
Works: core, hips, buttocks, arms and thighs



2. Criss-cross

Keep your hands behind your head, elbows open to the side and bring your knees to a tabletop position. Lift your head and neck up and cross your right elbow towards your left knee as you extend your right leg long 45 degrees.

Now switch, bringing the left elbow to the right knee as you extend the left leg. Make sure you keep your abs engaged and reach your elbow outside of the bent knee.
Reps: 10
Works: core, inner and outer obliques, hips, shoulders arms and thighs

3. Ballerina butt lifts

Swing your legs around and lie down on your belly. Place your forehead in on top of your hands with your elbows wide to the side. Bend your knees and press the heels together, turning the toes out to the sides.

Engage your buttocks, hamstrings and lower back and press your heels up to the ceiling lifting your knees off the mat. Make sure your tailbone stays long and you keep your lower abdominals engaged to protect your lower back.
Reps: 12
Works: lower back, abs, hips, buttocks and hamstrings

4. Swan

Extend your legs long and reach your arms overhead. Engage your lower abdominals and back and lift everything up off the floor keeping your head in line with your spine. Imagine you are being pulled apart from end to end. Hold for 3 breaths and lower down.
Reps: 3
Works: the hamstrings, arms, lower back and butt

Getting hitched? Consider a pre-nup

What's at stake. A pre-nup makes sense for Canadians getting married later in life who have accumulated assets and debt

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

If you are marrying later in life, a pre-nup might be a good idea. ISTOCK IMAGES

Two years ago my husband and I purchased property in Florida, taking advantage of depressed prices, the strong loonie and low interest rates.

The day before flying south to close, our lawyer called and told us the deal might be on the rocks.

Turns out the seller's ex (they were married less than three months) refused to sign off on his share of the property. Though the woman had bought it years before they got married, Florida law supported his matrimonial rights to the small farm.

We did end up closing the deal, but had the seller insisted on a pre-nuptial agreement waiving hubby-to-be's property rights, the problem would have been avoided.

Pre-nups make sense because Canadians are getting hitched much later in life.

In 1972 the average age at first marriage was 22.5 years for women and 24.9 for men, according to Human Resources and Skills Development Canada. By 2008 first-time brides were 29.1 years old and grooms just over 31.

Those who marry at an older age usually have accumulated significantly more assets and/or debt than those who are younger.

For this group there is a lot at stake, especially when you consider that 40 per cent of all marriages end in divorce.

If you are marrying later, a pre-nup might be a good idea. Such agreements are fairly common for second and third marriages, but first-timers often feel squeamish talking about money, let alone a pre-nup.

More info

Visit boomerandecho.com/is-a-prenup-really-necessary/ for more pre-nup information.

Do you need a pre-nup?

Four areas of concern:

- Business. If you own one, especially if you have a partner, excluding it from community property could make sense.
- Inheritance. Especially if there are children, consider segregating all or a portion.
- Education. Frequently one person delays their training or education to support the one who is studying. A pre-nup can even out income post-divorce or pay for the supporting spouse to pursue their studies.
- Debt. Nothing could be worse than having to share a-soon-to-be-ex's big load of debt. In a pre-nup, you can state which debts are to be shared and which are individual responsibilities.

I spent last Sunday afternoon watching my best friend compete in horse jumping at Spruce Meadows, a world-class equestrian facility just south of Calgary.

The weather was beautiful, the competition lively and the laughter infectious as families and friends picnicked and shared the experience. Amazingly, the cost for those attending was zilch … zero ... nada! That's my kind of activity.

Check out what's happening in your city by looking online at community websites and newsletters. Many festivals, sporting events, plays, lakes and outdoor parks are free to attend. Plan picnics, hike, bike and take advantage of recreational passes to pools and other city-run amenities. Host friends and family at a pot-luck barbeque and game night.

If you have a family, enroll your children in free literacy programs at your local library. Having worked at the public library for four years while going to school, I can vouch for these programs, which often include face-painting, arts, crafts, reading, plays, movies and the occasional outdoor excursion.

Use Groupon.com or other coupons to buy discounted family passes to movies, local museums, the zoo and amusement parks.

Rethink your holiday. If flying to London for the Olympics is out of your budget, vacation closer to home.

Keep on the lookout for last-minute deals like Westjet's Blue Tag events or use websites like Hotwire.com. Look through your account statements to see where you've collected loyalty points. Cash your points in for free flights, car rentals, train tickets and accommodations.

Get your car tuned up and hit the highway to a nearby vacation destination. Target a place outside a major hub where accommodations are less expensive, such as a bed and breakfast or campground.

Better yet, stay with family and friends or swap your house through a website like houseexchange.com or homelink.org.

Alternatively, save your travel for the off-season and enjoy the summer weather right here at home. You'll benefit from reduced rates on just about every aspect of your travel.

Last April, following Spring Break, my cousin and I went to Maui for $1,000 per person, which included taxes, flight and hotel. If we'd traveled just one week prior (high season), we would have spent nearly $3,000 per person for the exact same trip.

Planning is key for road trips with the kids

With the summer in full swing, my husband this year has decided that the entire family (me (his wife) and our three kids) should go on a car trip. Now as romantic and poetic as that may sound, I can't imagine anything worse! This sounds like pure torture. So what should I do? Help!

Have you talked to your husband about your feelings? Don't be afraid to respectfully, but sincerely, voice what has you so stressed. Now if you both agree to still do this car trip, plan for it in advance.

1. Have a driving route predetermined.

2. Decide what you think is a reasonable amount of driving per day that all of you can handle being in the car and yet not killing each other.

3. Plan on snacks, meals and distractions for the kids while driving.

4. If possible, pre-book hotels so that you're not looking for a place to sleep; if the hotel has a pool or kid distractions, all the better.

5. Don't feel like you have to drive all day long — maybe on some days you only drive three or four hours with a fun stop like an amusement park, shopping mall, hotel pool, etc.

6. Relax and come up with a plan to deal with the car music, and lastly, I strongly believe some quiet time is always enjoyable!

Make sure your kids have some distractions while on the road. ISTOCK

A choice between love or career

Dating at work.
Office romances can be a tricky endeavor, which could potentially hurt your career

PHOEBE HO
For Metro

Workplace love stories, like the one seen in The Office, may seem enticing, but in reality it can be a very different story. HANDOUT

Besides providing comic relief and a heartwarming love story, the hit American show The Office is also a great guidebook for office couples, according to a branding expert.

Watching the show's office couple Jim and Pam gang up on their arch enemy Dwight is a hoot on TV, but in reality alienating co-workers is just one of the many issues inter-office romances stir up, says branding expert Nancy Shenker and author of Don't Hook Up with the Dude in the Next Cube.

"The Office is a great example of both good and bad, the goods were that they met, they married, they fell in love, they lived happily ever after, but the bads are that it does alienate them in some ways from the rest of the people in the office," she says.

And that's just one of the many problems with office dating, she says. In many cases, when relationships don't work out, it strains the work relationship and makes it "perpetually awkward" for both the couple and those around them.

"Whenever human emotions come into play, it gets really dicey and that happens with same sex relationships as well," says Shenker, who has years of experience as a boss.

With about 38 per cent of workers admitting to dating a co-worker at least once in their career in a 2011 survey by CareerBuilder, Shenker says it's virtually impossible to stop office romance from happening — with or without an office dating policy.

But she warns that inter-office romances are complicated, and could potentially hurt your career and/or impact your professional reputation.

As a boss, Shenker's first concern about office romance is its potential impact on productivity and confidentiality issues.

For the career-driven, a thoughtless office romance could put a damper on one's professional aspirations. From a personal branding point of view, Shenker says dating a co-worker, or worse, an employee, shows a lack of self-control.

"Once you get to a certain level in the business food chain, you have a level of accountability and responsibility that really should take precedence over your human urges," she says. "It would make me question their professional judgment."

But there are exceptions to every rule. Shenker says for those who do find their soul mate at work, they need to tread carefully, "Do it with your eyes wide open," and set up ground rules.

And if true love surpasses hierarchal positions, then one person should think of leaving the company to avoid feelings of favouritism amongst coworkers.

Ultimately, it's a choice between love or career.

"If it really is your true love, then yes, it's totally worth it, cause you can always get another job, but you can't always find another soul mate," says Shenker. "That's the romantic in me speaking."

"I don't understand why this is a big rift. I'm just here to play baseball and things will happen. There's no Bobby V. versus Kevin Youkilis or vice-versa. It's the Chicago White Sox against the Boston Red Sox and just playing baseball."

NHL. After 'long process' Green remains a Capital

Mike Green re-signed with the Capitals on Monday. GETTY IMAGES FILE

The Washington Capitals didn't wait long to make Mike Green a better offer.

The Capitals signed the defenceman to a $18.25-million US, three-year contract on Monday. The move comes a day after Green rejected a $5-million, one-year qualifying offer from Washington and became a restricted free agent.

Green will earn $6 million in 2012-13 and 2013-14 and $6.25 million in 2014-15 after playing just 81 games over the last two injury-plagued seasons.

"It's been a long process," Green said in a conference call. "Negotiations started early in the year then obviously with the setback of the injury we were going to wait. And then wait after the playoffs, then after the draft, then after free agency, so it's been pushed back."

The 26-year-old Calgary native has seen his production drop over the last two limited seasons. He played just 32 games in 2011-12 due to a groin injury and had three goals and four assists.

The Capitals are gambling Green can get healthy and return to his previous form, which saw him break the 70-point plateau in the 2008-09 and 2009-10 seasons. He has reached double digits in goals three times, including a 31-goal season in 2008-09.

Wait for Valanciunas appears over in Toronto

NBA. According to sources, Raptors close to finalizing deal to bring big Lithuanian prospect to North America

After dumping one player who didn't fit into their plans to create a bit of financial and roster flexibility, the Toronto tors Raptors are about to sign a vital piece of their future.

Jonas Valanciunas, the 20-year-old Lithuanian centre who is seen as a key cog in the roster's improvement, should be officially signed, sealed and delivered in the next couple of days.

Sources say the letter of clearance — a formality to get Valanciunas to the NBA — has been received by the league, one of the final steps necessary before the seven-footer can officially sign his contract.

The No. 5 pick in the 2011 NBA draft is currently with the Lithuanian national team preparing for the Olympics.

While there was little doubt that Valanciunas would be in training camp this fall, having him signed early allows the Raptors to move on with other roster needs.

And they now have a bit of financial wiggle room and a free spot after dealing James Johnson to the Sacramento Kings on Monday afternoon for a 2014 second-round draft pick.

Johnson averaged 9.1 points and 4.7 rebounds for the Raptors last season.

"James is a tremendous athlete who has a toughness you love," said Raptors coach Dwane Casey. "With the abundance of wings we have, there would not have been enough minutes."

Johnson would have had to battle newly acquired Landry Fields and Linas Kleiza for minutes at the small forward position and the Raptors have also toyed with the idea of perhaps using DeMar DeRozan there in some instances.

Van Beilen riding wave of momentum to London

Swimming. Oakville teen believing in her ability after strong showing at Olympic trials in Montreal

When Tera Van Beilen was nine years old, she did what most nine-year-olds do when left to their own devices.

Nothing.

Oakville's Van Beilen was a hyperactive, sporadically sporty kid, but her parents thought she could use some athletic direction.

"I was sort of going through a chubby phase," Van Beilen says, chin tucked in to her chest and smiling shyly.

They took Tera to a local club for swimming lessons, half-hoping she'd like it. She was the family's most enthusiastic user of the backyard pool.

This wasn't a Eureka moment. Tera liked swimming enough to make it a regular thing.

But through grade school it remained a hobby and a physical outlet, rather than an obsession.

Today, Van Beilen, a distinctly un-chubby 18-year-old, is headed to the London Olympics, a surprise medal contender in the 100-metre and 200-metre breaststroke.

Genetics must have something to do with this. Her uncle, Wayne Van Dorp, played for the Blackhawks and the Penguins. Her cousin, Joel Reinders, is an offensive tackle with the New York Giants.

"He's the one protecting Eli Manning. Or is it Peyton Manning? I'm not sure. One of the Mannings," Van Beilen said.

Like her gargantuan cousin, Van Beilen's progression is proof to parents everywhere that a child can master a sport without sacrificing every other thing it means to be a child.

"They let me have swimming and still have school. I had both worlds," Van Beilen says.

Right into high school, Van Beilen played other sports. It wasn't until age 15 that she made swimming her focus.

A great many athletic stories — both amateur and pro — start precociously early and are filled with nothing from then on but practice and competition. In an extreme example, 10-year-old Alexander Ovechkin played in a hockey tournament the day after his brother died.

Van Beilen went to a regular school — Oakville's Kings Christian Collegiate — rather than a sporting academy. On Friday nights, she watched Say Yes to the Dress with her mom. She went out with friends on Saturdays. She attended the birthright of all typical teens — the prom.

Even after swimming became her job, she treated it like one — a Monday-to-Friday thing. However, it was an exhausting Monday-to-Friday thing.

She was cut a few breaks at school. Teachers would occasionally let her go out to her car and sleep through a class. Her mother, Sharon, an administrator at the school, set up a quiet room for Van Beilen to nap through her spares.

She graduated last year.

Time of her life

At the Olympic trials in Montreal in March, Van Beilen qualified for the 100-metre, placing second, a mild surprise.

- But in the 200-metre final, she pushed third-place finisher and current world record holder Annamay Pierse off Canada's Olympic team. Her time of 2:24:03 was, at that point, the second-fastest time in the world this year.

Host effect. U.S. study predicts Britain could win 62 Olympic medals

A U.S. study has predicted that Britain will easily beat its goal of winning at least 48 medals, including 25 golds at the London Olympics.

The Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth released a study Monday which calculated that competing on home turf could be worth an additional 15 medals for the British team over the 47 it won at the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

The study's predictions of a possible 62 British medals — giving the host nation the fourth-highest overall medal prediction — are in line with bets being offered by London's usually savvy bookmakers.

Even better for the British athletes, Tuck underestimated the U.K. medal total in 2000, 2004 and 2008. If that trend continues, the medal haul could be higher this year.

The study predicts the U.S. will get 103 medals, followed by China with 94 and Russia with 67. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Record arrivals

Heathrow Airport has its busiest day

The opening ceremony is still 11 days away, but for many in London, the Olympics really got started Monday.

Heathrow Airport had its busiest day ever as thousands of athletes — from Dutch beach-volleyball players to South Korean gymnasts — landed with their javelins, bicycles and sails, and moved smoothly through customs.

Motorists grappled with new traffic lanes painted with the Olympic rings and reserved for only official vehicles and dignitaries. At least one American athlete tweeted that his bus got lost on the way from Heathrow.

Smart-looking sailors guarded the gates to Olympic Park, looking so cheerful that visitors would never guess they had been pulled off leave only a few days ago to fill an embarrassing security gap when a private contractor failed to provide enough personnel.

And as the Olympic flame made its way beside the seaside in the resort of Brighton, organizers revealed plans for its arrival later this week in London. How's this for an entrance: A Royal Marine carrying the torch will slide down a rope from a helicopter into the Tower of London.

There was a feeling of Olympian scale at Heathrow — the airport was handling some 236,955 arrivals and departures Monday, breaking the record of 233,562, set on July 31, 2011. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Expectations tempered for Canadian track and field

The Canadian Olympic Committee has set a goal of finishing among the top 12 countries in the overall medal standings at this summer's London Games.

Here's a look at the Canadian track-and-field team's medal potential.

Past results

Priscilla Lopes-Schliep won bronze in the 100-metre hurdles for the country's lone medal in Beijing and Canada's first in Olympic track and field since the 1996 Atlanta Games. The Whitby, Ont., hurdler would have been one of Canada's top hopes in London, but in a stunning upset at the Olympic trials, she stumbled on a hurdle and didn't make the team. Athletics Canada head coach Alex Gardiner says the team is still gunning for two to three medals, but the absence of Lopes-Schliep makes one medal more realistic.

Dylan Armstrong, Kamloops, B.C.

He's been on the rise since missing a shot-put medal by less than a centimetre at the Beijing Games. The 31-year-old from Kamloops, B.C., was ranked No. 1 in the world last season, and captured silver at the world championships.

Jessica Zelinka, London, Ont.

Jessica Zelinka was fifth in the Olympic heptathlon four years ago, but her Canadian-record performance at the trials has her ranked No. 4 in the world. The 30-year-old from London, Ont., will also race the 100-metre hurdles and is Canada's fastest entry in a race in which anything can happen.

On the rise. With junior Wimbledon titles in tow, Bouchard and Peliwo represent bright future for tennis in Canada

These are heady days for Canada's tennis program when two 18-year-olds can turn up at a news conference and place three Wimbledon trophies on the table.

That's what Eugenie Bouchard of Montreal and Filip Peliwo of Vancouver did Monday as they were officially welcomed back from their triumphs in junior competition at the All England Club last week.

Bouchard took the junior girls titles in singles and doubles, while Peliwo won the junior boys competition at the grand-slam event. Both were firsts for Canada, which is suddenly awakening from a long run of tennis mediocrity in singles play.

"Canada has become a country with ambitions," said Louis Borfiga, who runs the national tennis centre that produced Canada's emerging crop of young talent. "Now we have to keep working hard to try to become a great tennis country."

The triumphs at the junior level followed the rise of 21-year-old Milos Raonic of Thornhill, Ont., into the world's top 30, the highest a Canadian has reached since rankings were inaugurated in 1973. Vancouver's Rebecca Marino, 21, who is currently on leave from the sport, and 24-year-old Aleksandra Wozniak of Montreal have also made strides in the women's game.

Peliwo reached the final at two grand slams earlier this year, the Australian and French Opens, and is now the world's top-ranked junior.

"I knew that if I played my best tennis on a consistent basis it was possible, but I didn't think I'd have a record like this and be No. 1 after Wimbledon," said Peliwo.

Federer reigns with most weeks as top ATP player

After winning Wimbledon a week ago, Federer returned to the top for the first time since June 2010. Monday marked his 287th week at No. 1, one more than Sampras. Federer first became No. 1 in 2004 and spent 237 consecutive weeks at No. 1 from February 2004 to August 2008.
